PAUL MALLON STARTED SOMETHING

One of the byproducts of the war is certain to be a wave of soul-searching in education. Millions of young men and women have been called upon to make rapid adjustment to emergencies. New teaching methods have been tried, for the purpose of obtaining results more quickly than usual. The educational system is being tested in the crucible of military emergency. The usual wartime problem of juvenile delinquency has reappeared.

Into this unsettled situation, Columnist Paul Mallon, with a vast reading audience at his command, has injected an indictment of "progressive" education, naming it as the culprit for everything that has been found wrong with education in general. Mr. Mallon has started something, though it is not easy to be sure what it is.

His indictment of "progressive" education, by which he means the doctrine of abandoning conventional native practices in favor of methods directed toward voluntary individual development, seems suspiciously broad. It may be questioned whether it has had the influence he attributes to it in the breakdown of discipline and neglect of basic requirements. In other words, the things he decries may not be the result of educational methods, as such, but rather the result of an attitude toward education in general.

There is, moreover, an assumption in Mr. Mallon's argument that because certain things are wrong, therefore education must have broken down. We suspect it would be just as logical to argue that because certain things are right, therefore education hasn't broken down. If today's products of education, either conventional or "progressive," are not everything that could be desired, who will rise to say that yesterday's conventional products were generally superior?

Down through the ages, men have been looking at boys and girls and finding them a little less well equipped to bear the consequences of the declining generation's mistakes than could be wished—but somehow the boys and girls seem to get better year by year in spite of it. Of course, they also get worse. It all depends on where you stand to look at them.

JAPAN LOSSES WHERE IT HURTS

As the United States is able to testify, having experienced the full force of German submarine warfare, the most telling damage to Japan's war effort is being done by American submarines in the Pacific.

Latest bag is 27 Japanese ships, 22 claimed by submarines, bringing the total since Pearl Harbor to 642 sunk, probably sunk, or damaged by undersea warfare. This may be compared with a total of 279 United States vessels sunk during 1942 and the first 11 months of 1943 by submarines in the western Atlantic. It means that Japan has lost outright since the beginning of its war with the United States enough essential ships to upset its naval ratio with this country and Great Britain. While no one knows for certain what Japan's replacement rate is, common sense makes it plain that a nation with Japan's relatively limited resources cannot approach the replacement rate of the United States—which has had considerably fewer losses to replace.

In the people's great anxiety to understand the war, to follow its course and to grasp the potentialities of weapons, they yet have not been able to realize the potentialities of naval blockade by submarines. The United States is using submarines for all they are worth against Japan, just as submarines have been used against this country and Great Britain by Germany—and both can testify that no weapon in this war or its predecessor came closer to forcing a showdown. Japan is losing where it hurts, in the long supply lines it must maintain to bring the potentialities of its vast empire into wartime and peacetime being.

RESULTS COUNT IN DIPLOMACY

In the United States, foreign policy and the diplomatic tools with which it is fashioned are theoretically the reflection of popular will and public principles. The people back up their diplomats to the extent that diplomatic actions serve the people's interests.

Thus, the people stand ready to back up a foreign policy conciliatory to Russia, for instance, as long as an attitude of conciliation promises to bring the desired result, which is a practical working arrangement with an important ally in the war with Germany and a potentially important ally in the war with Japan. But it must be plain by this time that Russia's failure so far to behave in a conciliatory manner in return has put United States diplomacy on trial.

Instead of condemning Premier Stalin and his regime for failure to behave in a manner calculated to make American diplomacy look good, the American people are singularly prone to condemn their own diplomacy for making itself look ineffectual by comparison. Their admiration is not for techniques, but results—and Russia seems to be getting the results. Russian diplomats, like Russian generals, seem to be masters of the unorthodox.

It is too soon to make conclusive opinions; in the long run, it may turn out that the American method had more to commend it than was evident at first sight. But again, the outcome will depend on the result. The Roosevelt administration ultimately must stand judgment on foreign policy as well as domestic policy. Its claimed mastery of foreign policy will be determined finally by what is accomplished.

THE THEORY OF IMPREGNABLE DEFENSE

Ralph E. Heinzen's summary of information on Germany's "Atlantic wall," compiled while the former United Press chief for France was a German prisoner, is a sharp reminder to his countrymen of the tremendous military problem being solved by Gen. Eisenhower and his staff. Mr. Heinzen, though admitting much of what he has to report is on the word of Germans, plainly is impressed by the massive preparations prepared to deal with invasion at any point from Spain to the Arctic circle.

These Atlantic defenses and the military works lying behind them are expressions of Germany's theory of impregnable defense. All together, they constitute the greatest project of its kind ever undertaken—far greater than their immediate predecessor, the Maginot line, or the famous Chinese wall of antiquity. But the essence of all defense works is the same, and therein lies their common weakness. Being defensive in nature, they are static.

In each day's news are fresh reports of the heavy bombardment of Germany occurring despite the Atlantic wall and the West wall, which faced the Maginot line. Static defense is not stopping bombers. When the time comes, defense will not keep the Allies from getting inside the perimeter of the German works—and thereafter the walls and defense in depth will be as futile as the Maginot line was when it was outflanked.

THE STARS SAY:

For Friday, March 24.

THE LUNAR transits dominant on this day are of complex and conflicting significance. There are several signs of most encouraging prospects which may bring honors, favors or prominence in public, community or fraternal organizations. These tokens of preferment or recognition may call for celebrations or pleasant gatherings, with social, domestic, affectional or sentimental functions. However, there are signs of deceit, intrigue, undercover or subtle forms of attack, probably dragged into the open with explosives and immoderate fury. A strict regard for name, position, home and health should be preserved, to reap promised benefits and personal gratification.

Those whose birthday it is may find themselves confronted by complicated, perplexing and subtle situations, difficult to handle unless there be strict adherence to proper rules and regulations. With this undercover state of affairs, it is wise to bring sinister situations to the surface in order to handle them with candor and discretion. The social, financial, emotional and physical well being may be jeopardized by tempestuous, explosive and reckless indulgences. With vigilance and care there may be public as well as private tokens of personal popularity, prestige or honors, with suitable celebrations or possibly romantic adventure. Place trust in old friends rather than strangers.

A child born on this day may be blessed with such versatility and ingenuity although it may be easily victimized or suffer from subtlety and fraud.

Florence is the most beautiful city in Europe. It has 10 percent of the world's art treasures. We don't want to damage that beauty, but the Germans have been taking advantage of our laying off. If you can't hit the target, don't drop your bombs.—Air Force Lt.-Col. Joseph R. Holzapple in Italy.

GUARDING YOUR HEALTH

Teething Process Is Not Dangerous

BY LOGAN CLDENING, M. D.

WHEN THE child born in the present year of grace gets to be six months old it should get down on its knees and thank heaven it was not born in the era which is not so far in the past, when teething was degraded as an abnormal, difficult and even dangerous process.

Dr. Clending will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

If the baby was "teething" in the gay nineties, that explained any fever, loss of weight, tantrums, convulsions or nearly anything else. Dr. Abt, in his book of reminiscences Baby Doctor which I mention elsewhere in the column this week, describes it:

"But if some diseases had not yet been recognized, others had been invented. In old record books of dispensaries, there frequently appears a diagnosis of difficult dentition, accompanied by an account of a wide variety of symptoms. The old writers even had a fancy name for this process, dentition difficilis. They associated the condition with fever and a great number of disorders, including skin diseases, croup, convulsions, diarrhea, cholera, and paralysis, and asserted that it frequently resulted in the infant's death. When I prepared a paper on the history and theory of dentition diseases, I found running through all medical history the belief that teething was a difficult and dangerous process."

I have actually seen in my own apprentice days a doctor pull out his pocket knife and cut the gums of a poor, little, helpless baby in order to let the teeth erupt. The gums often got infected in this way, hemorrhage resulted and death actually occurred and was ascribed to teething.

I can give you a table which shows when the teeth should erupt, but I am not sure that you ought to learn it or have it around.

The first pair, the lower central incisors, appear in the center part of the lower gum about the eighth month. Note I said "about." If they appear at six months it doesn't mean the child is going to be a genius, and if they do not show up by the ninth or tenth or even eleventh month don't worry yourself to death; such tardiness has no sinister implications. At one year there are usually three or four pairs of teeth, at eighteen months six pairs, at two years eight pairs, and at two and a half years ten pairs which is all the temporary teeth the baby is going to get.

The temporary teeth demand care from a dentist just as the permanent teeth do.

The first permanent teeth to come in are the molars, the grinders, in the back part of the jaw, behind the temporary teeth. They come in at the age of six or seven years, and don't think they are some more temporary teeth and neglect them. They are most important for the architecture of the jaw and need regular early attention from the dentist. The permanent central incisors come in soon after the lateral incisors at seven to nine years, the bicuspids at ten to twelve years, and the others twelve to fourteen years (except the famous and ill-named wisdom teeth.)

MANY NEVER SUSPECT CAUSE OF BACKACHES

This Old Treatment Often Brings Happy Relief

Many suffer relief from backaches quickly, once they discover that the real cause of their trouble may be tired kidneys. The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking the excess acids and waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about a pint a day. When one of the kidney functions is impaired, the waste matter remains in the blood, it may cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up at night, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headache and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Don't wait until Dr. Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

RED CROSS WEEK IN THEATERS SET

As a tribute to the Red Cross a film, "Report From the Front," will be shown at the State and Grand theaters March 24-28 as the movie industry observes national Red Cross week.

Collections for local Red Cross work will be taken at both theaters. The collection last year netted $500. Humphrey Bogart, recently returned from an extensive tour of the battlefronts, where he entertained our troops, is featured in the film which gives a visual record of the actual work being accompanied by the Red Cross in the field and serves a dual purpose in acquainting the American public with the ways in which their past donations have been put to work.

"Yuh mean there's a WAR on!"

Not long ago, the papers carried a story of two hermit brothers who wandered into town and found to their great surprise that America was at war.

Probably the prices they had to pay for food and supplies gave them the first sharp, shocking realization that something was happening.

At least, in the unlikely event that their cave is wired for electricity, you can be sure that they never noticed the war in their electric bills!

Even though almost everything else costs more in war, the price of household electricity has stayed at the low pre-war level. Moreover, every war industry has had ample electric power, and all essential civilian needs have been satisfied.

We're proud of the big war job our industry has done—by careful planning, hard work, and good business management. We're proud to have a part in that job—and hope that you'll never know there's a war on—by looking at your electric bill!

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, March 23—Pledged to rebuild the health and welfare of subjugated nations once they are freed, Congress set in motion today the financial machinery for bringing that day closer.

Chairman Bloom (D-N Y.) said the house foreign affairs committee probably would report favorably before nightfall a bill to continue lend-lease for another year beyond June 30.

America has disbursed $19,000,000 in lend-lease to the Allies.

Yesterday the house adopted and sent to President Roosevelt legislation pledging U. S. participation in the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation administration. The vote was 285 to 58.

The measure authorizes a $1,350,000,000 contribution to a United Nations "kitty" for the helpless of Europe and Asia. Bloom said an appropriation measure to give UNRRA financial status would be introduced soon.

POLITICS

The nation's capital, busy with the war, turned its weather eye once more toward the political situation, as Maine and Louisiana prepared to lead off tomorrow in a seven-state series of political conventions and primaries that will name 217 Republican and 142 Democratic delegates for the national conventions before April 1. Other state selections by the end of this month will be in Minnesota, New York, Iowa, Kansas and Arizona.

AIR CONTROL

American Airlines, Inc., is seeking to acquire control of American Export Airlines, Inc., and there are indications a titanic struggle may come about among American interests for commercial air supremacy over the Atlantic. The proposed transfer of control is certain to intensify activity in Washington concerning U. S. postwar international air transport policy.

SUGAR RATIONING

Present estimates indicate housewives will receive about the same amount of sugar this year as they received in 1943 and that the commodity will remain on the ration list for some time—at least through the year.

The senate's new 11-man oil committee today began an investigation of plans for a pipeline to transport oil products from the Persian gulf area to the Mediterranean. The project has been condemned by Sen. Moore (R-Okla.) as an attempt of the administration to get into the private oil business.

Premier Antonescu

Bela Imredi

PREMIER ION ANTONESCU of Rumania and the pro-Nazi former premier of Hungary, Bela Imredi, are thrust into the news spotlight following Adolf Hitler's seizure of Hungary and the possible forced inclusion of Rumania and Bulgaria with Hungary under a unified command "to intensify the German war effort in southeast Europe." According to reports, Premier Antonescu met with his war minister and young King Mihai in a secret conference, presumably to make plans for meeting or surrendering to the advancing Russian forces. Reports indicated Antonescu was expected to propose the withdrawal of all Rumanian forces from Russia to positions behind the Prut river and to renounce all claim to Bessarabia and perhaps northern Bucovina. Meanwhile, in Hungary, Imredi was understood to have refused to head a temporary government in co-operation with Berlin. He was reported to have ordered the arrest of his predecessor, Premier Nicholas Kallay, in Budapest.

Air Blast Trap Catches Insects On Texas Farm

PLAINVIEW, Tex. — Eighty-three-year-old A. R. Nisbet has constructed a farm insect catcher. Tried out on cotton and other crops, it operates on the air blast principle, covers two rows at a time and weighs only 250 pounds. The bug catcher can be attached to any make of tractor and will work while the farmer is cultivating or working with his crop.

A large fan propelled by the tractor's motor blows air through two pipes, curved to project the air blasts upward to strike insects seeking shelter on the under sides of leaves.

The blasts blow the insects into funnel-shaped pipes with bags attached to their ends, opposite the air vents. These bags trap the pests, which are burned.

P. E. Posey, Pecos county farm agent, said the machine was 80 per cent effective.

Meanwhile a report by a U. S. technical mission tells of enormous oil deposits in the locale of the proposed line.

Merchant Rationing Notes For Consumer,

The value of the A-11 gasoline coupon which become valid yesterday has not been reduced and will remain at three gallons. It was emphasized today by the District Office of Price Administration after numerous reports that gasoline station operators and the public had misunderstood last week's announcement of a reduction in rationing.

Although the value of each coupon remains at three gallons, the A-11 tickets must last through next June 21, one month longer than the previous two-month periods. The effect of this will be to reduce the A book driver's allowance to two gallons per week instead of three.

Several series of supplemental, transport and non-highway gasoline ration coupons issued last year, only a few of which still remain in the hands of consumers, will be invalid for use after April 1. It was announced today by the OPA. They include B, B-1, C, C-1, strip T coupons which do not bear the designation "2nd QTR", and E and R coupons which bear the words "permits delivery of one unit of gasoline."

The campaign to have motorists endorse their gasoline coupons as an aid in eliminating black market practices is progressing satisfactorily throughout this area, the District Office of Price Administration announced today in revealing that more than 2,500 coupon books of motorists had been examined in the first two weeks of the current drive.

Investigators who have interviewed drivers at filling stations find that more than 80 per cent have their coupons properly endorsed, OPA said.

WPB CREATES AREA URGENCY COMMITTEE

Plans for establishment of a Modified Production Urgency Committee in the Canton area were announced today by E. Oscar Kuendig, district War Production board manager, who will serve as chairman of the group.

The committee also will consist of representatives of the War Manpower commission, War department, Navy department, Maritime commission, War Food administration, Aircraft Resources Control office and other agencies as the committee.

tee may, from time to time, call upon for assistance.

In this area, the Modified Production Urgency committee will work in conjunction with the Manpower Priorities committee. Its territory will cover the counties of Stark, Columbiana, Wayne, Guernsey, Tuscarawas, Carroll, Holmes, Coshocton, Harrison.

Primarily, the function of the urgency committee will be to determine the urgency rating for each plant in this area and to certify such ratings to the War Manpower Commission's Priorities committee. Those urgency ratings establish the relative importance of a plant's war production program for the guidance of the War Manpower commission in directing the flow of labor supply.

U. S.-FINN BREAK HELD INEVITABLE

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER
WASHINGTON, March 23.—A break between the United States and Finland appeared today all but inevitable.

The only thing believed capable of preventing final diplomatic rupture would be some official word that peace negotiations between the Finns and Russia have not collapsed completely.

Hope that such word would be forthcoming was very slight in informed quarters here.

The Finnish government was notified several days ago that the United States was reconsidering its relations with Finland. A break was not openly threatened but was clearly implied since it is about the only diplomatic measure left to Washington.

On excellent authority it can be said the American policy toward Finland is based on the following principles:

The United States has maintained relations with the Finns despite the fact they are allies of Germany and enemies of Britain and Russia because American leaders thought that by so doing they would have more chance of getting Finland to quit the war.

Fear Future Program

When the point is reached where President Roosevelt and Secretary Hull decide this chance no longer exists there will be no further reason for maintaining relations.

The Finnish government's reluctance to make peace, as it is understood here, is based more on fear of Russian future policy than on any specific item in terms offered by Moscow.

There is a conviction here that if the Finns could receive some unquestionable assurance that the Russians would not seek any domination over Finland in the future, or attempt to interfere in Finland's internal affairs, Helsinki would accept the Russian terms since it is impossible for the Russians to do more than to give the assurances they have given, that the terms offered represent their full demands.

In the circumstances the Finns apparently are gambling on Russian exhaustion in the war with Germany to such an extent that she would not want to fight Finland to a finish.

Children Are Overcome

CINCINNATI, March 23.—Five children were overcome by fumes last night in the home of Douglas High, prominent Cincinnati real estate dealer.

Mr. and Mrs. High were not at home and the children were left in Mary's charge.

WAGE VIOLATIONS CITED BY BUREAU

(By Associated Press)
HARRISBURG, Pa., March 23.—Frank J. G. Dorsey, regional director of the wage-hour and public contracts division, U. S. Department of Labor, declared today war production has not eliminated low wages from American industry.

Dorsey, in a prepared address to the annual convention of the Pennsylvania Stone Producers association, asserted the annual report of the division showed that of the 45,000 plants found in violation of the wage and hour law in the year ending June 30, 1943, approximately half the violations were for failure to pay minimum wages of 30 cents an hour, set by the act, or 40 cents an hour where the industry was covered by an administrative wage order.

Dorsey also asserted child labor has been increasing in recent months. From September, 1936, to October, 1943, he said, assessed liquidated damages for child labor violations under the Walsh-Healey act were about $55,000, while from Nov. 1, 1942, to Feb. 1, this year, they totaled nearly $167,000 or nearly three times as much.

Just Call Me Swing Sick Susie, Reporter Comments After Visit To Randolph Field

By MARGARET KERNODLE, AP Features Writer

RANDOLPH FIELD, Tex.—Just call me Swing-Sick Susie or No-Night-Vision Nellie. I earned the titles just like an aviation cadet.

Never had I experienced airsickness in 31 hours of riding Army Air Forces aircraft to visit stations directed by the air surgeon. Nor as I looked for a soft spot in a bucket seat had I encountered any trouble with night vision.

But down here at the School of Aviation Medicine, I quickly learned about both.

The "swing test" showed me what grounds one per cent of the pre-flight students.

If a cadet shows airsickness signs like pallor, sweating on the forehead or upper lip, or a nervous stomach, he is subjected to 20 minutes in a streamlined swing. That's how it differs from childhood swings. A child swings a few minutes, lets the swing "die down," and goes to it again but rarely takes it for a long time. This test is to sit in the cockpit swing straight through 20 minutes.

If you really fear flying, you usually get a sick headache which lasts 24 hours after you land. And you probably never will love flying. But if you're affected mostly by motion, you're likely to be okay as soon as you upchuck.

Susceptible Enough

Col. Paul A. Campbell, chief of the research laboratory here, told me, "If you're not susceptible to motion sickness, you can take the swing test."

A grinning cadet set me swinging and after about a minute on the 75-degree arc my dizzy brown eyes saw the School of Aviation Medicine swimming unsteadily around me. I longed for the equilibrium of a roller coaster.

In two and a half minutes I welled up a whisper, "Let me out. Let me out now!"

One out of five get sick in the swing test. I was one—definitely!

But Col. Campbell restored my faith in flying when he said, "The best test for airsickness is 10 flights in a plane."

With a small smile I said, "Thanks, I can take them, but flight surgeon, spare me that swing!"

Next I tried the night vision test. I figured that would be a cinch, as much as I'd been out camping. So I swaggared through the half-hour of wearing red goggles for adjustment from daylight to darkness.

Accidental Hit

All I had to do was push a circle until it clicked to signal that I'd adjusted it for a bulls-eye on a target at the other end of the dark room. This circle is like a dial telephone. It has a notch in it which matches a cut-out in a larger circle—the target—which is moved at various positions by the instructor. You hit the target when the position of the notch in the circle you push matches the position of the notch in the instructor's circle.

My first shot clicked, and my imagination soared to war theaters and how many enemy planes I could be downing.

Something was wrong. I couldn't see a thing.

The hit had been an accident.

My second shot missed—and so did many more. I glued my eyes straight on the target in spite of the fact that I'd been told to look to one side of a night target except in bright moonlight. This was my first proof that our eyes have parts which see by night and parts which see only by day or light.

The scorer covered the register with his hand so nobody could see how low I scored.

But I'd learned my lesson: I practiced sideways glances at objects and then tried sighting with a wooden machine gun on which the boys train four hours to perfect the sideways vision trick.

Reconversion In Postwar Period Means Opportunity, Headaches For Industries

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Postwar planning in industry? With the war not yet over, how much of it is fact? How much spindrift? What of postwar employment, postwar markets, postwar prices? What, concretely, is being done toward "reconversion" to the economy of peace? Is there reason to believe our returning service men will actually want to return to their old manner of life? What new factors will enter the picture when peace comes?

The Associated Press offers herewith the first of three articles based on a survey of Ohio industry. In no sense definitive, it offers nevertheless an up-to-the-minute study of what a typical cross-section of war-lazy executives is thinking. More than a score of industries, big and small, were surveyed and additionally, top-men in such diverse fields as major league baseball, medicine, psychiatry, state employment, banking and labor were interviewed.)

(By The Associated Press)

Reconversion is a war-born sawbuck word much in the public mind, and to representative Ohio industrialists it means: 1—Post-war opportunity; 2—Post-war headache.

It can be said at the outset that, although a number of war factories have resumed peacetime production on an uncertain and in most cases fractional scale, reconversion now is mainly a stray thought in the business mind.

As one man close to Cincinnati industry put it, "for the first time since before Pearl Harbor, the top men are getting a little intellectual leisure to think about post-war problems."

"The period when production had to go up and up every week is over," commented Morris Edwards, executive secretary of the Cincinnati Chamber of Commerce. "The great rush is past and the main job is keeping up the pace, which is not so taxing intellectually as constantly figuring out how to go twice as fast."

Trends of Thought

A high-spot survey of the state shows these main developments or trends of thought:

1—Machine tool builders already have experienced a substantial slackening of war orders and can't expect peace orders until their customers, makers of consumer goods, start retooling for new models. Com-placating this is the fact that many general purpose tools, like radial drills, turret lathes, etc., made for war work, are readily adaptable to peace work, thus saturating this market.

2—Tire and automobile and truck part makers expect heavy civilian demand to keep them going for a long period after the war with little reconversion at all.

3—Specialized industries, such as aluminum and glass, are looking to brand new markets to carry them with a minimum of change from war-time methods.

Among tangible developments in post-war production, one Cleveland stove company is making stoves for civilians again. One Cincinnati machine tool plant is known to be working on tools for the first really new automobile models due to appear after the auto industry has put out enough 1942 models to satisfy immediate demands.

A number of factories which never got into full and steady war production because of fluctuating demand, have been able to keep their peace-time production dovetailed within the limits of availability of materials. An example is a firm which, in addition to war products, has been able to keep making newsboys' canvas carrier bags, carpenter aprons, etc.

Future Uncertainties

The rest of reconversion in Ohio is planning, with much of it uncertain.

Manufacturers now do not know what post-war costs—labor costs, material costs, distribution costs—will be, what the nation's tax structure will be, nor what government attitude toward business will be.

Some are confident, like the Mersman Bros. Corp., table manufacturer of Celina, whose general manager, Henry W. Winogrand, wrote: "All in all, we look for a time wherein the amount of business done by any company will be measured by ingenuity expended by the said company. We think there will be sufficient consumption to keep our nation's production at a high level."

A different view is taken by Bond Houser, Sr., president of Troy Sunshade Co., who said, "If there is any chance for enterprise and success ahead for business in the next 20 years, it is surely entirely depending upon the kind of government which we will have. I don't suppose anybody believes anything else but that we shall have very much of a socialized form of government."

John J. Rowe, president of Cincinnati's fifth-third Union Trust Co., one of the nation's 65 largest banks, said:

Can Do Trick Again

"Industry converted to war and it can convert from war. It can take reconversion in stride and the nation's banking structure is fully able to finance the change without government subsidy or interference. Unless the wage structure gets way out of line and fabulous demands knock out all our money values, I can see no demand on money that private enterprise can't meet."

William Jack, of Cleveland's controversial Jack & Heinz Co., regards the renegotiation law as a

Gas Restrictions Tightened By OPA In Central Ohio

(By Associated Press)

COLUMBUS, March 23.—John H. Summers, Columbus district director of Office of Price Administration, today announced a drastic shake-up in rationing procedure to stop "the bootlegging and counterfeiting of gasoline ration coupons."

Announcing the "new and tougher policy," for the central Ohio area Summers said:

"We have evidence that counterfeit coupons now are filtering into this section of Ohio, and we know there has been a little bootlegging inside some local boards. Therefore we have planned several methods for stopping the black market supply."

"1. We are changing coupons, with each one numbered serially so that strict accounting can be kept."
"2. All unused coupons now are kept in bank deposit vaults or other safe places at all times, except such as are necessary for every day's immediate need."

"3. The system for obtaining gasoline for farm machinery and other non-highway purposes has been changed, both as to form of coupon and places where the gasoline can be purchased. From now on there will be no excuse for a filling station accepting an R coupon for gasoline under any circumstances."
"4. We are seriously considering a method of issuing all coupons from a central issuing office in Columbus."

"5. We are setting up special devices and inspection forces to run down not only the counterfeiters, but the bad station attendant as well."
"6. Stricter surveillance of filling stations will be made for the detection of unlawful practices, including the purchase and use of counterfeit coupons."

"7. A special unit in our enforcement department... is functioning. This enforcement department will have charge of and will press for immediate action the three following types of sanctions:

"A—Suspension of gasoline stations from doing business;
"B—Injunction orders by the courts;
"C—Prosecution criminally."

"8. We are warning all filling station owners and attendants that there is no way whereby they can get gasoline except by the surrender of legitimate coupons."
Summers declared "we are going after the professional criminal with every legal means at our command. We now have the assistance of the United States Secret Service.... we shall have no mercy."

The War Today

By DeWitt MacKenzie

the declaration "contains principles highly dangerous to the British and Allied cause". A motion supported by 70 members to debate the charter was turned down by Premier Churchill, unless the hostile members wished to make it the subject of a "vote of censure" of the government—which they did not.

AN ILLUMINATING exposition of one of the strong trends of thought about the charter in Britain was given by the London Times in an editorial Monday. It should be noted that this great paper often has been inspired in its utterances, although it isn't the official mouthpiece of the government.

"Whatever may have been true in past centuries," said the Times, "the division of Europe today into 20 or 30 sovereign independent units, owing no allegiance to any higher authority, is incompatible with the military security and economic well-being of the European peoples. This is a hard, irrefutable fact. To attempt to override it on the grounds of any general theory of self-determination would be an act not of high political principle but of political madness."

We are, as I see it, on the verge of a period of hard-boiled and sometimes harsh realities. What the big three—America, Britain and Russia—have to iron out is whether there's any clash between idealism and these stern realities. While one can foresee headaches and heartaches, nothing has arisen thus far to challenge the broad general principles of the original declarations.
However, nothing has happened either to alter the trend towards division of the world into spheres of influence over which will preside the dominant nations.

48th attack of the war on Frankfurt, important chemical and engineering center.

A U. S. communique announced loss of 13 bombers and nine fighters on yesterday's Berlin foray, carried out by possibly 600 Flying Fortresses and Liberators and at least an equal number of fighters. The U. S. bombers dropped an estimated 1,500 tons of explosives.

Anti-Aircraft Fire Intense

The German air force offered virtually no opposition although anti-aircraft fire was described as intense.

"Some of our formations bombed assigned targets through breaks in clouds with good effect," the communique said. "Other formations attacked factories and transportation targets in the Berlin area through thick clouds by means of instruments, but could not observe the results."

Commander of one Liberator combat wing was Maj. James Stewart, former film star. It was his 11th mission but his first visit to Berlin.

Mustang, Thunderbolt and Lightning fighters from both the Eighth and Ninth air forces flew as escorts. On the homeward journey, the fighters shot up airmen, railway transport and other targets in Germany and enemy vessels along the coast.

A Stockholm dispatch to the London Daily Herald said the American bomber fleet had flashed a radio warning while enroute that it was coming to Berlin.

The dispatch said the warning said: "We are coming. Our targets will be in the northern and western (northwestern) districts of Berlin. Evacuate those districts at once."

Aviation Industry Seeks To Protect Its Young Workers

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, March 23.—Spokesmen for two branches of the aviation industry—transport and engine manufacture—today spoke up for continued draft deferments for young skilled employees, asserting in both cases that more than a fourth of their technical workers were under 27 years of age.

Meanwhile there were these other developments in the turbulent military and civilian manpower situation:

(1) The Army announced transfer to ground duty of 36,000 young men who had been earmarked for air training—an effort to make up for a general shortage of ground forces.

(2) A high military official reported draft boards had been failing for 13 months to meet the calls of the armed forces.

(3) Plans were made for congressional inquiry into charges that the draft has been used as a lever to force farmers into government agricultural programs.

In transferring the 36,000 candidates for flight training to ground duty the air forces also announced new enlistments of 17-year-olds in the Air Corps enlisted reserve had been temporarily suspended. Training of those already enrolled will continue, however. Reserve enlistments will be resumed at a future date. Applications may still be filed by the 17-year-olds during the suspension.

dawn while destroyers moved inshore to begin a bombardment if necessary. But the island remained silent.

Shortly after 8 a. m., the commander of the Marines under Brig. Gen. Alfred Noble told the waiting troops: "Natives on the beach are in plain sight. 'H' hour will be 8:30."

Armed amphibious tractors jockeyed for positions and at the designated moment surged forward with their loads of Marines.

The first wave hit the two beaches simultaneously, one landing at Eulolul harbor at the eastern end of the island, the other between Tasagina and Eleoa villages about a mile west.

At 8:45, the battle of machine-gun fire was heard from Elomusao island which forms the eastern shore of Eulolul harbor.

It first appeared the Marine patrol which landed on Elomusao had flushed up some resistance. A destroyer sent a few salvos ashore. That was all.

These Marines are veterans of the first Makin island raid of Guadalcanal, New Georgia, Bougainville and other Solomon action. Silver stars, Navy crosses or Distinguished Service medals could be worn by virtually every officer and most of the men.

Communion Cup Germless
CHICAGO—Two doctors reported that the use of the silver communion cup does not contribute to the spread of infectious disease. "Heavy metals, particularly silver," they said, "have long been known to have a self-sterilizing effect." The studies which resulted in this conclusion were made by Doctors William Burrows and Elizabeth Hemmens, both of the University of Chicago.

A new machine for testing anti-aircraft shell fuses has cut the number of factory rejections as "duds" from 20 per cent to one-tenth of one per cent.

Cleveland Indians Get Surprise From New 'Rocket Ball'

Home Runs Feature Tribe's Outdoor Practice With New Vitamin-Injected Baseball

(By Associated Press.)

LAFAYETTE, Ind., March 23.—Conversation in the Cleveland Indians' training quarters today turned to the 1944 "rocket ball".

The new vitamin-injected baseball was tested yesterday as the team went outdoors for the first time for a six-inning intra-squad game between the "Flame Throwers" and the "Secret Weapons".

No one was giving much thought about the new sphere until 155-pound Jimmy Grant up and slams a 400-foot home run. Then he ups and hits a long two-bagger. Then Pat Seery, a 223 batter in 26 games with the Tribe last year, got the urge and smacked a homer.

The immediate reaction was that all was not normal. Manager Lou Boudreau was quick to credit the uprising to the ball rather than to any outcropping of latent power in Grant and Seery, who never have been vicious at the plate.

"If the cover was any tighter it would be a golf ball," Boudreau said as he fondled it. "It actually has a ping when it's hit."

Joe Heving, the major league's only grandpappy, who incidentally is planning to marry soon, thinks the lively pellet is especially adapted to his sinker.

Terms It a Lifesaver

Mel Harder figures the ball will be something of a lifesaver to the game.

"I don't think it will make any difference to the pitchers," he theorized, "but I think the game needed something like this ball this season to make hitters out of guys who normally aren't. After all, the fans go to a game to see the ball smacked around. And with most of the power-hitters gone, this new ball, if it is as lively as they say, has come at an opportune time and will take up the slack."

This was the picture in other training camps:

Tomas De La Cruz having caught on with the Cincinnati Reds, in the rhumba department at least, the team may try some more experiments with new Latin American players.

One Chuchito Ramos, a Venezuelan outfielder, said in Caracas that he was packing up for Bloomington for a tryout.

The reason why Ray Starr doesn't want to pitch for the Reds is that they won't let him hurl every other day to keep his rubber arm in trim. Last year he was on the hill 217 innings in winning 11 and losing 10. There's a rumor the Reds might try to swap Ray to the

4 Tri-County Loop Berths Awarded To Columbiana Cagers

Tri-County league coaches must have been operating on the theory that "to the victors go the spoils," when they picked the loop's two all-star quintets.

Columbiana's Clippers, who won the 1943-44 championship, placed two players on each team. Forward Harry Case and Center Harry Hollinger landed first team berths and Guards Larry Kuck and Bill Dickson were chosen on the second five.

Hollinger, only player receiving first team honors from all coaches, was named captain of the first quintet. Bob Ritchie, Louisville forward on the first team, received six first team votes and one for the second quintet.

Minerva Fails To Place
None of the players honored was chosen on the All-Star teams a year ago. Fred Marshall, Boardman guard, a second team choice then, was accorded honorable mention this year.

Coaches considered only 23 players. Minerva failed to win a berth on either team, but John Steinbach was given honorable mention.

FIRST TEAM — Bob Ritchie, Louisville, f.; Harry Case, Columbiana, f.; Harry Hollinger, Columbiana, c.; Dave Arter, Lisbon, g.; Earl Lenz, Lisbon, g.

SECOND TEAM — George Simmons, Boardman, f.; Alex Walker, East Palestine, f.; Bob Sharpnack, Sebring, c.; Larry Keck, Columbiana, g.; Bill Dickson, Columbiana, g.

TOMMY BELL K.O.'S BERGER IN FIRST

(By Associated Press.)
CLEVELAND, March 23.—Matchmaker Larry Atkins had a new meal ticket today as a replacement for the one he lost when Jimmy Bivins, the country's number one active heavyweight, was accepted by the Army.

He's Tommy Bell, the hard-hitting Youngstown welterweight who disposed of Veteran Maxie Berger in the opening heat of their scheduled 10-rounder at the Arena last night.

A hard right to the head coupled with a fractured right ankle kept Berger down for the full count at 2:27 of the opening round but the ringsiders were convinced that even without the injury Maxie wouldn't have been able to go the distance.

Berger said he injured the ankle in attempting to twist away from the punch which floored him. The Montreal welter didn't lose consciousness and attempted to rise as the toll reached six but fell back on the canvas when he put his weight on the right leg.

A pair of vicious rights had staggered Berger before he went down as Bell rushed out of his corner obviously intent on a quick knockout. Maxie landed one good punch and it spurred Bell to deliver the blow which ended the bout. The triumph was the Ohioan's 37th in a row and his 26th via the knockout route.

Berger came in at 149½ while Bell scaled 148½. The card attracted 7,488 customers who contributed to a gate of $18,364.

The 1943 all-accident death toll was 1½ per cent below 1942.

THE RED CARNATION by BURTON STEVENSON

CHAPTER FOURTEEN
Duffy had been through the desk, of course, but Tony doubted if McKibben had ever kept anything of value in it, or anything confidential. That was what the big safe in his office was for. McKibben's gray silk pajamas lay across the foot of the bed. It had been neatly turned down, and the pillow-cases and sheets were crisp and unwrinkled, fresh from the laundry.

Then he stepped into the bathroom. The place was immaculate. But then Tony perceived a faint ring around the vent of the lavatory, as though someone had washed his hands there. The two towels hanging beside it on the rack were unsoiled and the clothes hamper in the corner was empty.

As he walked back into the bedroom, the policeman on guard outside opened the door and stuck his head in. "That boy of McKibben's is here again," he said.

"All right. Send him in."
The boy's eyes were showing a good deal of white when he entered the bedroom, especially when he saw the blood stain on the floor.

"Come on in, George," said Tony. "Your name is George, isn't it?"

"Yes, suh; George White."
"Well, there's nothing here to hurt you. I want you to look around carefully and tell me if you see anything that isn't exactly as you left it last night. Mr. McKibben left before you did, didn't he?"

"Yes, suh."
"What did you do after he had gone?"

"He had taken a bath and shaved, so I cleaned up the bathroom, and then put away his clothes and straightened up in here; I got out his pajamas and turned down the bed, just like I always do. Then I went home."

"You cleaned the bathroom, eh? Come in here. How did you come to miss that ring in the lavatory?"

George stared at it. "That wasn't there when I left," he said.

"Are you sure?"

"Yes, suh. I'd swear to it. I cleaned it careful. Somebody's been washin' his hands. Maybe it was Mistah McKibben when he got back."

"What did he wipe them on?"

George looked at the towel rack. "They's a towel gone," he said. "I always puts three towels on that rack, and he went over and looked in the clothes hamper. 'It's gone, all right.'"

"You're sure you left three last night?"

"Yes, suh. Absolutely."
"Anything else out of place?"

George looked slowly around. "Don't see nothin' else," he said.

"All right. Now come out here in the bedroom. When did you put these sheets on the bed?"

"Yesterday mornin', suh, after Mistah McKibben left. I always puts clean sheets on every Monday and Thursday. At other times too, when Mistah McKibben told me."

"Yes, suh, that's it."
"Is the bed exactly as you left it?"

George surveyed it carefully. "It don't look just right," he said at last. "Them sheets ain't as smooth as I left them, and that pillow's been turned around. I always put the open end toward the middle of the bed."

He picked up the pillow to turn it over. On the sheet underneath it was a faint smudge.

"Look at that, suh," he said. "That wasn't there, I'll swear it. That sheet was clean."

Tony stripped the covers back, but there was no other mark on either of the sheets. Then he pulled back the lower sheet to look at the mattress and stood staring.

About a fourth of the way down from the head of the bed and perhaps a foot from the right hand side was a small hole. It looked as though it might have been made by a pistol bullet, and when Tony sniffed at it he fancied that he could detect the odor of powder, but there were no powder marks about it. He turned the mattress back and found a similar hole on the under side. The set of box-springs beneath it had also been perforated.

"Ever see that hole before?" he asked the boy, whose eyes were wider than ever.

"No, suh. That wasn't there when I changed the sheets yesterday."

"Pull the bed over," said Tony, and when it was out of the way he carefully searched the carpet underneath it, but found nothing there. Indeed there was no evidence that the bullet, or whatever had made the hole, had touched the carpet.

The columnist motioned the boy to push the bed back into place, and stood for some minutes looking down at the hole. He could think of no way in which it could have been made except by a bullet fired into the mattress. But why should anyone do that? Had there been someone on the bed? But even a Colt thirty-eight would not be powerful enough to send a bullet through a mattress and a set of springs. Besides, there was no sign of blood and the sheets were unsoiled except for that little smudge at the top.

With a grunt of disgust Tony turned away. "Fix the bed just like it was," he said, "and I don't want you to say a word to anybody about this."

"No, suh," said George, and began smoothing up the sheets.

When he had finished, Tony took him for a tour of the apartment, and confirmed his guess that the long windows opening on the terrace were not always locked. But there were no more discoveries until they reached the kitchen. There, as George was casting his eye along the line of cooking utensils which hung above the range, he uttered an exclamation of surprise and hastily took down a heavy skillet.

"Look at that!" he cried, and pointed to a sharp indentation in the bottom of the skillet. "What could have done that?"

"You mean it has just been done?" Tony asked.

"It's been done since yesterday mornin', that's sure. That's a special skillet for flapjacks. Mistah McKibben got it down in Virginia. I made him some for his breakfast yesterday mornin', and it was as smooth as glass then."

Tony took the skillet and looked at it closely. The indentation had evidently been made by a heavy blow with some sharp instrument. Or perhaps somebody had been using it for a little pistol practice.

He remembered the hole in the mattress.

"That's all for tonight, George," he said and replaced the skillet on its hook and handed the boy a dollar.

"Thank you, suh. When kin I get my things?"

"I'll speak to Lieutenant Duffy. Tomorrow afternoon, I should say."

"Thank you, suh," said George again, and took his departure.

Tony glanced at his watch, saw that it was nearly ten o'clock, and suddenly realized that he had no dinner. He left the apartment and the building.

It was after midnight when Tony walked up the steps of the old house looking down on Washington Square. He found Garrity seated at his desk, rattling away on his typewriter. He finished his typing with a flourish and pulled the sheet of paper out of the machine.

"Anything new?" Tony asked.

"McKibben's death is going to make quite a stink," Garrity answered, lighting a cigarette. "He was just another low-down thief."

"Have you got a list of his victims?"

"Not yet. I'll see that you get a copy as soon as I do."

"All right. Now I've got a little something for you," and Tony told of Lily Edgerton's return, and of the hole in the mattress of McKibben's bed and the mark on the skillet.

"Well, I'll be blown!" said Garrity.

Tony sat down at his desk and dialed Chelsea 3-7992. Somewhat to
